September Newsletter

Welcome Back! This September we will be focusing on “Back to School” topics such as school supplies, school rules, and the daily schedule. Here are some ways to support this learning at home.

Vocabulary

Discuss what this vocabulary is with your child. Practice using these words in sentences.

Language Lab

Activity ideas for September:

- School supply scavenger hunt: hide different school supplies around a room and have your child search for them.
- Describe it! Talk about and show your child how different school supplies are used.

Expand and Explore:

Joint Attention

Joint attention means you and your child are looking at and doing the same thing. When you play together and focus on the same toy or activity, you both have more to talk about! This helps you understand what your child knows and likes.

Why it matters: Kids who practice joint attention find it easier to focus in school and at home. It also helps them stay on the same topic when talking.

This month's tip: Play together and try to keep your child's attention a little longer each day. Notice how much more you'll have to chat about!
