COMMUNITY

The Middle Country Central School District is a large school district on Long Island serving a suburban population with approximately 9,622 students who are enrolled in two high schools, two middle schools, eight elementary schools, and two pre-k/kindergarten centers.

SCHOOL CHARACTERISTICS

Centereach and Newfield High Schools are comprehensive high schools housing a combined total of approximately 3,000 students in grades 9-12. The high schools have an experienced professional staff, innovative educational programs, and advanced teaching facilities that combine to produce quality education for all students. The school year is divided into two semesters. Each semester is twenty weeks in length with ten-week grade periods and five-week interim periods. The school day consists of nine periods.

GRADING SYSTEM/CLASS RANK

A student’s weighted class rank is determined in the fall of his/her senior year and made official at the conclusion of the 3rd quarter. Rank is based upon grades students have achieved in all high school courses except physical education, pass/fail courses, work-study, academic intervention services, credit by examination and courses taken on an independent study or audit basis. High school courses taken in the eighth grade are included in the ranking. In the case of repeated failed courses, both final grades will appear on the student transcript. The higher final grade will be calculated for the Grade Point Average (G.P.A.).

Class Rank is determined by dividing the total number of quality points earned by the number of credits taken. Quality points are computed by multiplying the Index Value by the assigned weight. Each subject is assigned a weight according to the difficulty and grade level of the course. Eighth grade accelerated courses plus ninth, tenth and eleventh year subjects are included for ranking purposes. Rank is the weighted G.P.A. in descending order.
