The trip departs at 9:00 AM and returns to Liberty around 2:00 PM.

* LMS Food Service Dept. can provide a bag lunch, or students can bring their own lunch*

About the Trip

The Sterling Hill Mine, now known as the Sterling Hill Mining Museum, is a former zinc mine in Ogdensburg, NJ. It was the last working underground mine in New Jersey. It closed in 1986 and became a museum in 1989. Along with the nearby Franklin Mine, it is known for its variety of minerals, especially the fluorescent varieties. It was added to the National Register of Historic Places on September 3, 1991, for its significance in industry.
