Principal's Message

Taking a Fresh Look at Behavioral Expectations

Positive Behavioral Interventions and Supports (PBIS) is an important element of Morris School's social emotional learning curriculum. This evidence-based framework promotes a positive school culture, and it also supports improved academic and behavioral outcomes for all students. Over the past twelve months, Morris School has taken a close look at its implementation of PBIS and hit the reset button on the schoolwide values that guide its behavioral expectations. After considering several possibilities, the school community came to consensus on a value statement that captures the Morris spirit: Morris Mustangs T.R.O.T. with Pride!

Take Responsibility.

Respect Others.

Offer Kindness.

Think Safety.

With the schoolwide values in place, Morris students and staff have worked together to identify specific, observable behaviors that support each value in each school setting. For example, students and staff agreed that an observable behavior that supports Think Safety in the parking lot is for students to wait for their car to come to a complete stop before entering or exiting the vehicle.

At the beginning of this school year, all students and staff participated in Morris School's PBIS Day, when teachers explicitly taught and modeled all of the expected behaviors in the settings where they apply. Since then, Morris staff members have been on the lookout for students demonstrating Morris School's T.R.O.T. expectations, and they've been providing students with specific praise and positive reinforcement when those behaviors have been observed.

Research shows that behavioral expectations that are clearly communicated and consistently reinforced can support a student's academic success and social-emotional well-being. For more information about PBIS and its impact on a positive school culture, check-out <https://www.pbis.org/pbis/what-is-pbis>.

Building Independent Learners: Strengthening Executive Functioning Skills at Home and at School

Does your child struggle to start homework, organize their backpack, keep track of assignments, or manage their time? Executive functioning skills are the brain's "air traffic control system"—the tools we use to plan, focus, remember instructions, and juggle multiple tasks. In this practical workshop, the Greater Anaheim SELPA will break down how executive functioning impacts classroom performance and home routines. Parents and educators will leave with concrete, easy-to-implement strategies—including visual checklists, time-management tools, and organization systems—to help students build independence and confidence.
