these areas are tracked through the dashboard. She also discussed LCFF/LCAP funding and the potential impact of noncompliance on charter renewal, as well as the role of the Yuba County Office of Education in oversight. Areas of concern were identified, including five red flags related to credentialing, the need for a deeper review of CALPADS reporting, and the possibility of incorrect codes being used.

Patricia Hamilton, a parent/guardian from the Foothills, expressed concerns regarding the transparency and honesty of YES Charter School and the accuracy of information being provided. Patricia raised concerns regarding credentialing, staff misassignments, and Special Education, including the implementation and provision of services outlined in Individualized Education Programs (IEPs). She expressed concern that students may not be receiving the services and educational support needed to meet their educational needs and emphasized the importance of transparency, accountability, and ensuring students receive the appropriate services and education.

Louise Miller, Principal of YES Charter Academy, addressed the concerns raised and explained that she is working closely with YCOE credentialing expert Jennifer Allread regarding credentialing. Louise acknowledged that some staffing issues are beyond her control, including circumstances related to teacher assignments and availability. She explained that the school is making efforts to secure appropriately credentialed teachers in their respective subject areas; however, there is currently a shortage of qualified teachers.
