U.S. HISTORY II: Course Description

United States History II is a required Grade 11 course that examines the development of the United States from the post-Civil War era through contemporary America. Major areas of study include industrialization and the Progressive Era, imperialism and the world wars, the Great Depression and New Deal, the Cold War, the Civil Rights Movement, the Vietnam era, the conservative resurgence, and recent domestic and foreign-policy developments. New Jersey history, African American history, the contributions of women and historically underrepresented groups, career connections, civic values, and current events are integrated throughout the course.

Student Outcomes:

Helping students develop and effectively use a wide variety of skills is a central purpose of social studies. These skills are central to one's learning throughout life. A command of these tools will be of assistance to students in understanding their society and in becoming productive members of the American community.

Students will be able to:

- Determine the credibility and value of information, while also considering context, point of view, and multiple perspectives
- Collaboratively evaluate possible solutions to problems and conflicts that arise in an interconnected world
- Critically analyze information, make ethical judgements, and responsibly address controversial issues
- Communicate through rational, persuasive written and oral arguments about controversial issues
- Make informed and reasoned decisions and accept responsibility for the consequences of their actions and/or inactions
- Take actions that result in a more equitable society
- Analyze sources of prejudice and discrimination and propose solutions to eliminate them
- Evaluate evidence from primary and secondary sources
- Develop and practice debating skills
- Write a valid Document Based Essay
- Continue to develop research skills through the use of electronic sources, such as scholarly articles from online databases
- Analyze commonly accepted historical arguments and explain how an argument has been constructed from historical evidence
- Compare and contrast points of view from multiple authors or sources
- Recognize cause and effect
- Analyze and evaluate historical patterns of continuity and change over time
- Identify, analyze and synthesize information on maps, charts, graphs, photos, etc.
- Analyze cartoons as a means of expressing viewpoints
- Identify and understand what constitutes differences and duration of various historical periods
- Comprehend and understand historical chronology and timelines

Interdisciplinary Connections

Teachers will combine, integrate and infuse disciplines as needed. ELA reading, writing, speaking and listening assignments are infused throughout the curriculum to develop basic reading and comprehension skills. Other suggestions for interdisciplinary connections:

- Career Transition
- Mathematics and Business can be combined with economic units
- Science can be combined with discussion of climate change

- Art, music and literature will be called upon to supplement what is learned in history and develop cross curricular development
- The teacher will collaborate with the library media specialist on research units

Accommodations and Modifications: Each unit has examples of possible accommodations/modifications. Charts of accommodations/ modifications are found at the end of the document.

Amistad/Holocaust/LGBTQ+/Climate Change/AAPI/DEI Connections

Amistad Connection:

In Unit 1, The Gilded Age and Progressive Era, students examine discrimination against African Americans in employment and organized labor, their contributions to industrialization, and the contrasting philosophies of Booker T. Washington and W.E.B. Du Bois. Unit 2 examines segregation in the armed forces, the service of Black soldiers during World War I, and the Great Migration. Unit 3 addresses the Harlem Renaissance, anti-lynching activism, and African American contributions to American culture. Units 4 and 5 examine the unequal effects of the Great Depression, the Black Cabinet, New Deal policies, and changes in African American political participation. Unit 6 examines the service of African Americans during World War II and the Double V campaign. Units 7 and 8 trace the development, strategies, leaders, achievements, and continuing challenges of the Civil Rights Movement. Later units connect these developments to voting rights, education, housing, employment, criminal justice, and ongoing efforts to address the vestiges of slavery and racial discrimination.

Holocaust Connections:

United States History II addresses bias, prejudice, bigotry, antisemitism, propaganda, dehumanization, exclusion, bullying, genocide, resistance, and civic responsibility. Units 1 and 3 examine nativism, antisemitism, immigration restrictions, and the discrimination experienced by Jewish immigrants and other minority communities. Unit 6 provides sustained instruction on the Holocaust, including Nazi ideology and discriminatory laws, the persecution and murder of European Jews and other targeted groups, resistance, bystander behavior, liberation, the American response to Jewish refugees, antisemitism within the State Department, and the creation of the War Refugee Board. Students evaluate how individuals, institutions, and governments can prevent, resist, or enable persecution and connect historical study to the responsibilities of citizens in confronting hatred and harassment.

LGBT/Disabilities:

The curriculum includes instruction on the political, economic, and social contributions of persons with disabilities and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer people. Students examine urban community formation, the effects of eugenics and forced sterilization, Buck v. Bell, and discrimination in law, employment, education, medicine, the military, and public life. Individuals and movements may include Jane Addams and Mary Rozet Smith, Henry Gerber and the Society for Human Rights, Harry Hay and the Mattachine Society, George Takei, James Baldwin, Marsha P. Johnson, the Stonewall uprising, Harvey Milk, and Billie Jean King. The course also examines the repeal of sodomy laws, military service policies, and Obergefell v. Hodges. Disability history includes the work and experiences of Helen Keller, Franklin D. Roosevelt, disabled veterans, disability-rights activists, and the passage and impact of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990.

Climate Change:

The climate and environmental connections in United States History II examine the effects of industrialization, resource extraction, mechanized agriculture, conservation, environmental justice, and climate change. Students study land degradation during rapid industrial growth, the conservation movement, the Dust Bowl, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the modern environmental movement, and federal environmental legislation. Contemporary instruction considers how rising temperatures, extreme weather, pollution, and changing landscapes affect communities, public policy, migration, economic choices, and competing regional interests.

Asian Americans & Pacific Islanders:

The history and contributions of Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders are integrated throughout United States History II. Students examine migration, community formation, labor organizing, cultural contributions, military service, citizenship, and political activism. Topics include exclusion and quota laws, Angel Island, South Asian and Sikh immigration, Filipino and Pacific Islander labor, anti-Asian violence, Japanese American incarceration, AAPI service during World War II, the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1965, farmworker activism, and later civil-rights movements. Students evaluate both the contributions of AAPI communities and the federal, state, and local policies that produced exclusion, segregation, and unequal treatment.

Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI):

Diversity is the presence of differences that may include race, gender, religion, sexual orientation, ethnicity, nationality, socioeconomic status, language, (dis)ability, age, religious commitment, and/or political perspective. Populations that have been, and remain, underrepresented among practitioners in the field and marginalized in the broader society. For example: Unit I - women and Chinese immigrants, Unit II - black soldiers in America, and Unit IV - Dust Bowl migrants. Equity is promoting justice, impartiality and fairness within the procedures, processes, and distribution of resources by institutions or systems. Inclusion is an outcome to ensure those that are diverse actually feel and/or are welcomed. To that end, this can be achieved through consideration of diverse histories, experiences and perspectives that promote the dignity and respect of all individuals. This can be seen through the lenses of the Amistad Connection, Holocaust Connections, LGBT/Disabilities, and AAPI, as well as other underrepresented groups in our nation's history. These resources and experiences are listed throughout this curriculum.

Two-Year United States History Sequence: United States History I and United States History II collectively provide the required two-year sequence in United States history. United States History I addresses exploration and settlement through industrialization at the end of the nineteenth century; United States History II continues the sequence from the Gilded Age through contemporary America.

NJSLS Social Studies Practices

Practice	Coursewide Evidence
1. Developing Questions and Planning Inquiry	Compelling and supporting questions are developed through essential questions, current-event inquiries, research tasks, and DBQ investigations.
2. Gathering and Evaluating Sources	Students evaluate credibility, context, perspective, relevance, corroboration, and limitations in primary and secondary sources.
3. Seeking Diverse Perspectives	Students compare the experiences and interpretations of African Americans, women, immigrants, AAPI communities, Indigenous peoples, LGBTQ+ persons, people with disabilities, veterans, workers, and other groups.
4. Developing Claims and Using Evidence	Students construct defensible historical claims supported by accurate evidence, sourcing, and historical reasoning.
5. Presenting Arguments and Explanations	Students communicate conclusions through essays, DBQs, debates, presentations, simulations, research products, and AP-style written responses.
6. Engaging in Civil Discourse and Critiquing Conclusions	Students discuss controversial issues respectfully, evaluate competing claims, question assumptions, and revise conclusions in light of evidence.
7. Taking Informed Action	Students apply historical understanding to civic questions, public-policy issues, community concerns, voting, advocacy, and proposed solutions.

Assessment System

Formative assessments include source analysis, maps, graphs, political cartoons, images, discussions, short writing, homework, class activities, quizzes, and checks for understanding. Summative assessments include unit tests, essays, DBQs, research products, debates, simulations, presentations, and performance tasks. Three district common benchmark assessments are administered each year using DBQ Project-based tasks aligned to the NJSL Social Studies Practices and historical-thinking skills. Alternate assessments allow students to demonstrate the same standards through approved written, oral, visual, performance-based, or technology-supported products, consistent with IEPs and 504 plans.

Materials, Accommodations, and Interdisciplinary Evidence

Each unit identifies core and supplemental materials, including primary sources, secondary sources, maps, charts, graphs, images, oral histories, audiovisual resources, databases, and grade-appropriate historical texts. Unit-level and appendix-based accommodations address students with IEPs, students with 504 plans, multilingual learners, students not yet at grade-level proficiency, at-risk students, and gifted and talented students. Interdisciplinary connections include ELA, mathematics, science, visual and performing arts, business, technology, career readiness, financial literacy, and library-media research. Computer Science and Design Thinking standards 8.1 and 8.2 are integrated through data analysis, digital research, ethical evaluation of technology, and investigation of technological and environmental change.

6.1 U.S. History: America in the World. All students will acquire the knowledge and skills to think analytically about how past and present interactions of people, cultures, and the environment shape the American heritage. Such knowledge and skills enable students to make informed decisions that reflect fundamental rights and core democratic values as productive citizens in local, national, and global communities.

Content/Topic: Unit 1 The Gilded Age & The Progressive Era Time: 15 classes Content Statements: Technological developments and unregulated business practices revolutionized transportation, manufacturing, and consumption and changed the daily lives of Americans. The Industrial Revolution and immigration had a powerful impact on labor relations, urbanization, the environment, and cultural values and created tensions between ethnic and social groups. Progressive reform movements promoted government efforts to address problems created by rapid industrialization, immigration, and unfair treatment of women, children, and minority groups. Essential Questions: How did the Industrial Era define the US as a modern nation, specifically with regards to the consequences of industrialization, immigration, and urbanization? Were Progressives successful at achieving their goals? Integrated Research Unit:Summary

In order to ensure that a variety of research skills are embedded into our curriculum, we have created an Integrated Research Unit for each semester of each US History class (4 total). The content of this unit is flexible as is the product (i.e., PowerPoint presentation, video, etc.) The skills are what will remain constant in an effort to develop them throughout a student's experience as a history student at MHS.

The required skills are as follows:

1. Gathering source information – Students will be able to identify valid, reliable, and relevant sources. This includes Internet sites, reference books, non-reference books, newspaper articles, and other print sources.
2. Citations – Students will be able to properly cite information in a Works Cited/Bibliography as well as in-text citations when applicable.
3. Analysis and Synthesis of Research – Students will be able to analyze sources in a constructive way. They will be able to identify important information, relate that information to their research topic, and synthesize information to complete their product.
4. Written expression – Students will be able to create a written component of their research. The written component can be in the form of an essay (persuasive, informative, etc.), a formal research paper, a speech, etc. The emphasis is on the student's ability to form a comprehensive, organized, and detailed product related to their research that is entirely of their own efforts; time should be provided to discuss plagiarism and how to avoid it.
5. Visual/Oral expression – Students will be able to present their research using visual and public-speaking skills. Students will create a presentation for the class based on their findings. It is suggested that this component emphasize technology.
6. Technology – Students will be able to utilize various types of technology, such as PowerPoint, video-streaming, etc. as a part of the research process. Technology is infused throughout the unit in the form of both research methods as well as student products.
7. Personal Financial Literacy- Students will be able to demonstrate personal and civic financial literacy. Students will be able to apply financial knowledge and skills when making ethical consumer and financial decisions.

Essential Question: What are effective strategies for accessing various sources of information and historical evidence, determining their validity, and using them to solve a problem or find a solution to a public policy question?
Social Studies Skill	9-12
Chronological Thinking	• Compare present and past events to evaluate the consequences of past decisions and to apply lessons learned. • Analyze how change occurs through time due to shifting values and beliefs as well as technological advancements and changes in the political and economic landscape.
Spatial Thinking	• Construct various forms of geographic representations to show the spatial patterns of physical and human phenomena. • Relate current events to the physical and human characteristics of places and regions.
Critical Thinking	• Distinguish valid arguments from false arguments when interpreting current and historical events. • Evaluate sources for validity and credibility and to detect propaganda, censorship, and bias.
Presentational Skills	• Take a position on a current public policy issue and support it with historical evidence, reasoning, and constitutional analysis in a written and/or oral format.

BENCHMARK ASSESSMENTS: Three district common benchmark assessments are administered each year using DBQ Project-based tasks aligned to the NJSL Social Studies Practices and the following historical-thinking skills:

Establish historical significance

Use primary source evidence

Identify continuity and change

Analyze cause and consequence

Take historical perspectives

Understand the ethical dimension of historical interpretationsPossible Curricular Modifications:

Interdisciplinary Connections	Connections to NJSLs – English Language Arts: W.IW.11-12.2: Write informative/explanatory texts (including the narration of historical events, scientific procedures/experiments, or technical processes) to examine and convey complex ideas, concepts, and information clearly and accurately through the effective selection, organization, and analysis of content. W.SE.11-12.6: Gather relevant information from multiple authoritative print and digital sources, using advanced searches effectively; assess the strengths and limitations of each source in terms of the task, purpose, and audience; integrate information into the text selectively to maintain the flow of ideas, avoiding plagiarism and overreliance on any one source and following a standard format for citation (MLA or APA Style Manuals). RI.CR.11-12.1: Accurately cite a range of thorough textual evidence and make relevant connections to strongly support a comprehensive analysis of multiple aspects of what an informational text says explicitly and inferentially, as well as interpretations of the text. Connections to NJSLs – Mathematics MP.4: Model with mathematics. SL.PE.11-12.1 Initiate and participate effectively in a range of collaborative discussions (one-on-one, in groups, and teacher-led) with peers on grades 11-12 topics, texts, and issues, building on others’ ideas and expressing their own clearly and persuasively. SL.II.11-12.2 Integrate multiple sources of information presented in diverse formats and media (e.g., visually, quantitatively, orally) in order to make informed decisions and solve problems, evaluating the credibility and accuracy of each source and noting any discrepancies among the data.

CRP1. Act as a responsible and contributing citizen and employee Career-ready individuals understand the obligations and responsibilities of being a member of a community, and they demonstrate this understanding every day through their interactions with others. They are conscientious of the impacts of their decisions on others and the environment around them. They think about the near-term and long-term consequences of their actions and seek to act in ways that contribute to the betterment of their teams, families, community and workplace. They are reliable and consistent in going beyond the minimum expectation and in participating in activities that serve the greater good.	In specific units students learn about the Enlightenment thinkers and how those concepts became the foundation for American Democracy and citizenship. Writings from John Locke, Thomas Hobbes, Voltaire, Montesquie and Rousseau are analyzed and parallels drawn between these ideas and modern civic engagement and civic virtue. As in all Social Studies classes, the importance of being an informed citizen and participant in our democracy are reinforced on a daily basis.	As in all Social Studies classes, the importance of being an informed citizen and participant in our democracy are reinforced on a daily basis. In US I a unit is dedicated to the origin and creation of the Constitution and how it established our system of government through checks and balances and federalism. Students learn about the 3 branches of government, the powers and members of each in modern day as well as examine key Supreme Court decisions that have shaped our nation, including current issues and decisions. Voter registration drives are also conducted in each school	As in all Social Studies classes, throughout the US 2 curriculum the importance of being an informed citizen and participant in our democracy are reinforced on a daily basis. Supreme Court decisions relevant to each time period are examined, along with the election process. Students explore the Civil Rights Movement and Voting Right legislation.

CRP2. Apply appropriate academic and technical skills. Career-ready individuals readily access and use the knowledge and skills acquired through experience and education to be more productive. They make connections between abstract concepts with real-world applications, and they make correct insights about when it is appropriate to apply the use of an academic skill in a workplace situation	In all units of World History students engage in activities, assignments and projects to develop literacy, critical thinking, problem solving and technology skills that can be applied to the workplace.	In all units of US I students engage in activities, assignments and projects to develop literacy, critical thinking, problem solving and technology skills that can be applied to the workplace.	In all units of US II students engage in activities, assignments and projects to develop literacy, critical thinking, problem solving and technology skills that can be applied to the workplace.
CRP3. Attend to personal health and financial well-being. Career-ready individuals understand the relationship between personal health, workplace performance and personal well-being; they act on that understanding to regularly practice healthy diet, exercise and mental health activities. Career-ready individuals also take regular action to contribute to their personal financial wellbeing, understanding that personal financial security provides the peace of mind required to contribute more fully to their own career success.			Students engage in stock market analysis and personal finance simulations as part of the Great Depression/New Deal units

CRP4. Communicate clearly and effectively and with reason. Career-ready individuals communicate thoughts, ideas, and action plans with clarity, whether using written, verbal, and/or visual methods. They communicate in the workplace with clarity and purpose to make maximum use of their own and others’ time. They are excellent writers; they master conventions, word choice, and organization, and use effective tone and presentation skills to articulate ideas. They are skilled at interacting with others; they are active listeners and speak clearly and with purpose. Career-ready individuals think about the audience for their communication and prepare accordingly to ensure the desired outcome.	All units of World History include written, visual and verbal analysis of primary source documents and complex text to analyze historical questions clearly and effectively with reason. Specific texts and writing assignments are listed in each unit. Specific texts and writing assignments are listed in each unit.	All units of US II include written, visual and verbal analysis of primary source documents and complex text to analyze historical questions clearly and effectively with reason. Specific texts and writing assignments are listed in each unit.
CRP5. Consider the environmental, social and economic impacts of decisions. Career-ready individuals understand the interrelated nature of their actions and regularly make decisions that positively impact and/or mitigate negative impact on other people, organization, and the environment. They are aware of and utilize new technologies, understandings, procedures, materials, and regulations affecting the nature of their work as it relates to the impact on the social condition, the environment and the profitability of the organization.	New technologies developed during the Scientific and Industrial Revolutions are examined and how they impacted the social, environmental and economic development of different regions of the world.	United States expansion in the 18th and 19th centuries created a seismic shift in the environment and landscape of North America. The industrial era formed a new reliance on resources that impacted the overall environment.	During the late 19th through the 20th century the United States grew exponentially. The economic expansion weighed heavily on the overall environment. As the century drew to a close, there became a greater awareness of the industrial expansion and government intervention and oversight became more prevalent.

Career Ready Practices	World History	US I	US II
CRP6. Demonstrate creativity and innovation. Career-ready individuals regularly think of ideas that solve problems in new and different ways, and they contribute those ideas in a useful and productive manner to improve their organization. They can consider unconventional ideas and suggestions as solutions to issues, tasks or problems, and they discern which ideas and suggestions will add greatest value. They seek new methods, practices, and ideas from a variety of sources and seek to apply those ideas to their own workplace. They take action on their ideas and understand how to bring innovation to an organization.	All units in World History include problem- solving activities and simulations to apply historical concepts and skills to real-world, modern issues.	All units in US I include problem-solving activities and simulations to apply historical concepts and skills to real-world, modern issues.	All units in US II include problem- solving activities and simulations to apply historical concepts and skills to real-world, modern issues.
CRP7. Employ valid and reliable research strategies. Career-ready individuals are discerning in accepting and using new information to make decisions, change practices or inform strategies. They use a reliable research process to search for new information. They evaluate the validity of sources when considering the use and adoption of external information or practices in their workplace situation.	All units of World History include assignments and projects that are research based and require students to examine the validity and reliability of various sources including primary, secondary, periodicals, library historical databases and online historical research databases. All units of US II include assignments and projects that are research based and require students to examine the validity and reliability of various sources including primary, secondary, periodicals, library historical databases and online historical research databases.

CRP8. Utilize critical thinking to make sense of problems and persevere in solving them. Career-ready individuals readily recognize problems in the workplace, understand the nature of the problem, and devise effective plans to solve the problem. They are aware of problems when they occur and take action quickly to address the problem; they thoughtfully investigate the root cause of the problem prior to introducing solutions. They carefully consider the options to solve the problem. Once a solution is agreed upon, they follow through to ensure the problem is solved, whether through their own actions or the actions of others.	All units of World History include assignments and projects that require students to engage in critical thinking skills and problem-solving skills. Students examine the content specific problems from each time period of study, analyze various primary source documents, engage in biographical readings and examine how society addressed the problems at the time and how those problems and solutions may still be relevant to today. CRP9. Model integrity, ethical leadership and effective management. Career-ready individuals consistently act in ways that align personal and community-held ideals and principles while employing strategies to positively influence others in the workplace. They have a clear understanding of integrity and act on this understanding in every decision. They use a variety of means to positively impact the directions and actions of a team or organization, and they apply insights into human behavior to change others’ actions, attitudes and/or beliefs. They recognize the near-term and long-term effects that management’s actions and attitudes can have on productivity, morals and organizational culture.	The Holocaust is used to study human behavior, patterns of discrimination, morality and ethics.	Unique patterns of discrimination, genocide of Native Americans, American Slavery and various reform movements of the time are analyzed throughout these units in the form of primary source readings, case studies, assignments and cooperative, problems solving simulations.	Case studies on the ethical decisions behind use of the Atomic Bomb are examined.
CRP10. Plan education and career paths aligned to personal goals. Career-ready individuals take personal ownership of their own education and career goals, and they regularly act on a plan to attain these goals. They understand their own career interests, preferences, goals, and requirements. They have perspective regarding the pathways available to them and the time, effort, experience and other requirements to pursue each, including a path of entrepreneurship. They recognize the value of each step in the education and experiential process, and they recognize that nearly all career paths require		Lessons on government agencies and careers and guest speakers in the area of local government and law enforcement speak as part of our Constitution and Government Unit.	This standard is more specifically taught in our Social Studies elective courses. Those courses explore careers in civil service, law and law enforcement, social work, psychology and other humanities fields. Career Options for Jobs that Involve Social Studies

Social studies focus on society, and social studies professionals may concentrate on understanding how people are shaped and influenced by peer groups, their culture, or other societal factors. While some social studies professionals primarily conduct research to determine how people are affected by social variables, others may focus on how these social variables can be used to predict people's behavior. A handful of these social studies career options are profiled below:

Career Information for Jobs that Involve Social Studies

Sociologists

Sociologists are professionals with a master's or doctoral degree in their field. They focus on understanding social groupings and behavior, and may be involved in research or make recommendations about how to address specific issues in society. Since their work focuses on understanding how society can influence behavior, they work within the field of social studies.

Historians

Historians research the past and educate people about historic events, artifacts or developments. Their work focuses on civilizations and incidents involving people in the past, which is why it falls within the social studies field. They might use the data from their research to form conclusions about why a society relocated or how cultural beliefs in a particular group evolved. They may need a doctoral degree, although it is possible to enter this field with a master's degree in history.

Postsecondary Teachers

Postsecondary teachers instruct college and university students in a specific subject they've specialized in. They typically need a doctoral degree, although entry-level positions may be obtained with a master's degree in some cases. Postsecondary teachers who instruct students in subjects such as criminology or history spend their career focused on social studies. As part of their work, postsecondary teachers usually also participate in research related to their specialty.

Anthropologists and Archeologists

Anthropologists and archeologists must have a master's or doctoral degree to work in their field. While archeologists may be involved in recovering historic artifacts from dig sites around the world, anthropologists focus on how humans have developed over time. Archeologists and anthropologists help discover evidence that relates to how cultures have evolved, how significant events have impacted people's behavior, and how social constructs, such as politics, have developed. Since they focus on issues related to society and behavior, they work within the field of social studies.

Political Scientists

Political scientists focus on the history and development of political systems. They may research political ideologies or study how political trends have evolved over time. They are social science professionals because understanding how politics shape society and impact individual and group behavior is part of what political scientists focus on. They are professionals with master's or doctoral degrees who perform research, analyze the information gained from their research, and use that data to develop predictions about the effects of political policies or structures.

Market Research Analysts

With a bachelor's degree, it's possible to become a market research analyst. Market research analysts examine consumer demographics, along with data collected from opinion polls and surveys, and then use what they learn to make recommendations about actions companies should or should not take. For example, they may recommend that a new product be developed and provide pertinent information about the customers they expect would be interested in that product. Market research analysts are professionals who focus on understanding what influences the purchasing decisions people make and the economic variables that should be considered when making business decisions. Since they focus on determining financial and societal factors that can affect consumer choices, their work involves the use of social studies.
