B – SOCIAL STUDIES - What's in a Name? The Story of Saint Paul, MN

Name #1: Imnizaska The Dakota people have lived on this land for a very long time. They call the white bluffs along the Mississippi River Imnizaska (eem-nee-ZAH-skah), meaning “white rock.” In 1837, the U.S. pressured Dakota leaders into treaties. In 1862, the Dakota were forced out, but many returned and still live here.

Name #3: Saint Paul In 1841, a French priest named Father Galtier built a chapel there. He thought “Pig’s Eye” was not a good name for a town, so he began calling the place Saint Paul, after his chapel. There was no vote. The name caught on and stuck.

Think about it: Saint Paul has had three names: Imnizaska (from the land), “Pig’s Eye” (from a person), and “Saint Paul” (from a church). Saint Paul is the name on maps, but Dakota people still say Imnizaska. Who gets to decide what a place is called?

Check out those feet. The snowshoe hare has huge hind feet with furry, spreading toes that work like snowshoes, keeping it from sinking in snow. That's where it gets its name! It's another adaptation for surviving its habitat — where an animal lives and finds what it needs.
