Graham Mayfield, Assistant Principal of Crockett County Middle School, announced Friday that Angela Edwards has been named Outstanding Teacher of the First 9 Weeks at CCMS for her instruction in the school's CTE program.

"We selected Angela for her hard work and dedication to the students of CCMS," Mayfield said. "But a couple of letters from our students can summarize our choice as well as any other method."

The first letter, from Lily Lewis, contained the following: "Mrs. Edwards is one of the most heartwarming people I've met. She's always so kind to each and every student. Not only is she an amazing worker, she is also very talented and great at her job. She makes her class very fun and entertaining. She made social health seem very important, which is another reason I loved her so much. She has taught me how to better respect people and treat them with equality and kindness, which is something this world needs more of. We need more people like Mrs. Edwards!"

The second letter was from Sami Dew. And included these remarks:
"I really enjoyed having Mrs. Edwards as my Health Science teacher. She made learning fun, interesting, and meaningful. I always looked forward to her class. One of my favorite parts was getting hands-on experience because it allowed me to learn new skills and better understand a little bit of what it is like in the medical field. She made lessons engaging and gave us lots of great information and opportunities to learn. I am very thankful that I had the chance to be in her class because she helped me to become even more interested in Health Science. Mrs. Edwards was a great teacher who made sure we understood what we were doing while also making learning exciting. She encouraged us to ask questions to better understand, while she listened and answered our questions to the best of her abilities. I appreciate the time and effort she put into her lessons and helping us the best she can. I will always be grateful for everything I learned and experienced in her class."

The Crockett County School District congratulates Angela on her selection.
