Native American Heritage Month

The EHS Library is honoring Native American Heritage Month with a book display and an event that will take place Wednesday November 18th after school here in the EHS Library. Lauren Nabahe, the director of ENAEP and our own senior Jessica Williford will present a training workshop about the history and importance of Land Acknowledgements. In January Lauren Nabahe will come back on Wednesday January 20th after school in the EHS Library to do a training workshop on Truth and Reconciliation.

The book display we are featuring includes new titles from emerging authors and artists such as Fight Song by Kurt Van Brunt, the new graphic novel Indiginerds: Tales from modern indigenous life, and Award-Winning book Legendary Frybread Drive-In edited by Cynthia Leitich Smith. We will also feature Looking for Smoke by K. A. Kobell which won the Washington State book award last year. That one is my personal favorite as a fan of mystery and suspense. A teen girl is murdered at a Pow Wow, and each chapter is told from different points of view and one of them is the killer. It also brings up the important social issue of Murdered and Missing Indigenous Women or MMIW.

We are also having accompanying displays of El Dia De Los Muertos, Diwali, and a display of 3D Art Wire Emotion Sculptures. There is a lot to celebrate in November!
