Thankful for good reading

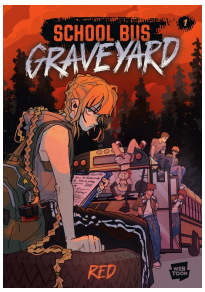

When her family inherits millions, Julia moves from Nebraska to New York City, where she struggles to fit in at her new elite private school and grows close to her tutor, Damion, who has his own motives and is secretly trying to uncover the truth behind her family's inheritance, even as they begin to fall for each other.

YA FICTION PAINTER LYNN

Lil is anything but small. She's rebellious, she's loyal; she's figuring out what kind of good person she wants to be, or if she wants to be a good person at all. But more than anything? Lil wants to be free. When her instinct for freedom leads to another stay in DC juvenile detention, Lil knows she's lucky to just be on probation. But judgment, guilt, and an ankle monitor weigh heavily on her, and she can't shake that pinned-down feeling. The only person who might understand is her big brother, Aldwin. Except he's more distant now than just the hundred miles where he's away at college. Something's been off with him for a couple of months, but only Lil seems to realize how important it is to get to him. As her court hearing ticks closer, a question looms over Lil as the missed phone calls and strange texts from her brother pile up: will she follow the rules until her sentencing, or put her future freedom on the line?

YA FICTION ACEVEDO ELIZABETH

Ashlyn has always been a loner, and she likes it that way. However, she's forced to make allies fast after a high school field trip goes horribly wrong, and she and a few others can now see a monstrous phantom invisible to everyone else. Thankfully, it doesn't seem to be able to hurt them—until midnight that is, when the skies turn red, and Ashlyn finds herself in a world of murderous ghosts. To survive, she'll need to trust her classmates and uncover the secret of the curse, but can she survive long enough to do it?
