Community Based Education (CBE)

The goal of CBE is to teach science, math, economic development, and computer technology in a practical, hands on environment where students do field work to help the Pueblo communities. CBE's curriculum is developed to meet each community's needs as identified by the various Pueblos involved in the program. During community visits, students conduct various field studies. When they return to class, the students enter the data into computers to inform current studies and to provide a database for future students. They present their research findings to the communities and throughout the country at special events.

Current Partnerships include:

- Jemez Natural Resources Department
- Tesuque Pueblo
- Santa Clara Forestry Department
- River Source
- Tewa Women United

Dual Credit

The Concurrent Enrollment and Dual Credit Programs allow High School students to take college courses, earning college credit, while still in High School. In order to participate in the program, students must meet requirements set by SFIS and the colleges. Outside of the Medical Careers, certificates include Early Childhood Education and Computer Architectural design.
