Rosemead School District Elementary Schools Honored as America's Healthiest Schools

Rosemead, California: Rosemead School District proudly announces that all of its elementary schools — Encinita Elementary School, Mildred B. Janson Elementary School, Savannah Elementary School, and Emma W. Shuey Elementary School — have been officially named to the list of America's Healthiest Schools by the National Children's Health Organization Alliance for a Healthier Generation and supported by Del Monte Foods, Kaiser Permanente, and Kohl's Cares. This national recognition underscores the district's ongoing commitment to fostering whole-child development, physical and emotional well-being, and safe, supportive social-emotional health & learning environments for all students.

The award highlights Rosemead School District's comprehensive approach to student wellness, which complements its rigorous academic curriculum and mission to nurture the intellectual, social, and emotional growth of every learner.

Key initiatives supporting student health, wellness, and success across the district include:

- Positive School Climate: All district schools maintain PBIS Platinum-level recognition, reflecting a districtwide commitment to positive school climate and student well-being.
- Empowerment & Leadership: The District's Leader in Me program, honored with a 2025 CSBA Golden Bell Award, emphasizes student empowerment, leadership, and personal responsibility.
- Holistic Student Support: Students benefit from robust physical, social, and academic programs, including dual language immersion, student wellness initiatives, and after-school enrichment.

"Receiving the America's Healthiest Schools designation across all our elementary campuses is a proud achievement for our entire district," said Board President Nancy Armenta. "This honor reflects our Board's steadfast commitment to ensuring that every child in Rosemead has access to a safe, supportive, and health-conscious environment where they can thrive."

"Our educators and staff work tirelessly every day to care for the whole child, nurturing not only their academic growth but also their physical and emotional well-being," added Superintendent Dr. Philip D'Agostino. "This national recognition is a testament to the dedication of our entire school community and our shared mission to empower healthy, confident learners."
